

GLOBUS INTRODUCES STUDENT DISCOVERIES PROGRAM

THE Globus family of brands has unveiled a new program called Student Discoveries, which will provide teachers and students an alternative to traditional educational travel options, helping transport lessons from the classroom and provide students with firsthand, hands-on learning experiences.

"Experience is a great teacher," said Scott Nisbet, president and CEO for the Globus family of brands.

"Created with input from students and educators, we have put together special Student Discoveries experiences in around the world that were designed to match class curriculum in Social Studies, Math, Science and Language Arts using something we call Discovery Moments, offering students the opportunity to personally explore people, places, historical events and even cuisines while on their custom tour."

With the launch of Student Discoveries, the Globus family of brands is introducing nine exciting itineraries to top-selling student destinations, both domestic and international.

Domestic itineraries include Washington D.C., Boston, Philadelphia and New York. International itineraries include Italy, London, Paris and Spain. These itineraries can be completely customized to fit a student group's needs, including offering in-depth topic exploration while bringing to life educational moments in a profound way.

With 32 offices worldwide, Student Discoveries, powered by the Globus family of brands, also can create custom tours to fit any group's enrichment interests, anywhere.

Through Student Discoveries, students and teachers can experience the world with the same high-quality journeys the Globus family of brands is known for, with the added benefit of an itinerary uniquely designed for the special needs of an educational group, thanks to guidance from expert Program Directors.

"Our Program Directors are multilingual and highly educated," said Nisbet. "They're the best in the businesses and are dedicated to delivering unforgettable travel experiences."
